P. O.:

I received your letter of yesterday, and was surprised to receive it, because when you disclaimed that you meant anything personal in your letter of March 24th, that part of the controversy, which was the only serious part of the episode, was ended, as far as I was concerned.

As to the paltry balance of $10.08 which you claim that I should refund to you on the hay, I regarded as a very trivial matter and which could easily be settled satisfactorily.

As to my conversation with Mr.

Dear Sir:

I received your letter of yesterday and was surprised to receive it because when you disclaimed that you meant anything personal in your letter of March 24th, that part of the controversy, which was the only serious part of the episode, was ended, as far as I was concerned. As to the paltry balance of $10.08 which you claim that I should refund to you on the hay, I regarded as a very trivial matter and which could easily be settled satisfactorily.

McKinney, which occurred before I received your letter of March 31st, and also before we talked the matter over, I stated in substance to Mr. McKinney that "I did not think any gentleman would use the language which you used (in your letter of March 24th) or if he did use such language he should be willing to apologize for it." As I was the person injured, I felt justified in the statement at the time. However, as you have disclaimed any thing personal, I will not be out done in generosity, and I will also disclaim anything personal I had in the talk I had with Mr. McKinney.

I hope the matter will end here, and to end the whole thing I herewith send you

As to my conversation with Mr. McKimney, which occurred before I received your letter of March 31st and alas before we talked the matter over, I stated in substance to Mr. McKimney that "I did not think any gentleman would use the language which you used (in your letter of March 24) or if he did use such language he should be willing to apologize for it". As I was the person injured I feel justified in the statement of the time. However, as you have disclaimed anything personal, I will not be out done in generosity and I will also disclaim anything personal I had in the the talk I had with Mr. McKimney.

check for $10.⁰⁸ which is the
